Notched concave discs provide a very aggressive cutting edge that is well suited for soil penetration (especially when the concavity of the disc is shallow). These discs are also a good choice for residue management.

Concave discs are used to pulverize and smooth the soil. Large diameter discs, sometimes called plowing discs, cut deep into the soil and turn it as they go. They're used where extensive soil disturbance is desired and the farmer's goal is to bury the residue from the last crop. Best of all, because they're made by Ingersoll, you have the assurance that they are manufactured to the highest standards of quality and sharpness and uniformity featuring the best steel formulations in the business.

Wavy Disc blades have the same application as our notched blades. They have the same manufacture and are the same top quality blade that we supply. They last about 20-30% than notched blades. They're better self cleaning and wear with an edge so better cutting throughout the life of the blade.
